

DERATED IN COURT.

Diamond Broker Kauffman Tongue-Lashed by Mrs. Gomez.

She Called Him "Liar" and "Thief" and He Grew Pale.

With Her Husband She Is Held on Seventeen Charges.

The examination in the case of the Gomez Kauffman alleged diamond swindle, which was adjourned from yesterday afternoon, came up before Justice McMahon in the Tombs court this forenoon.

Lawyer Louis Stecker appeared for Kauffman and Mr. Le Barbier represented the Gomezes.

It took most of Mr. Le Barbier's time before the case was called to prevent Mrs. Gomez talking too much. The hippant manner which she characterized as lady's deportment heretofore was not so noticeable today, although she does not yet seem to fully realize the seriousness of her position.

There was a scene just before the case was called. Jeweler Kauffman was standing by the rail, near Mrs. Gomez, waiting to testify.

Several times that lady's deportment heretofore was not so noticeable today, although she does not yet seem to fully realize the seriousness of her position.

Unable to contain herself longer, Mrs. Gomez broke out in a furious tirade.

"Look at him, the miserable thief. He dare not meet my eye."

"He knows that he got me to pawn the jewelry, and that he got all the money."

"His object in bringing this charge is only to get the things from the pawnbrokers without paying for them."

"The thief! The liar!"

Kauffman turned pale under Mrs. Gomez's scathing accusations and got away from her vicinity as quickly as possible.

Justice McMahon then called Kauffman to the stand.

The broker's story was substantially the same as has been already printed in this Evening World.

He said that he lived at 120 East Ninety-first street, and had, desk in the office of J. and E. L. Bell, making jewelry, at 25 John street.

He first met Mrs. Gomez a year ago last June at Mrs. Jackson's boarding-house, 107 West Twenty-third street. The landlady introduced them.

On June 24 the first dealings with the couple were had. He knew only that they claimed to be well connected and in a position to place large orders among wealthy friends.

There was never any written agreement between them. It was verbally agreed that Mrs. Gomez should carry around the jewelry and sell what she could and return the rest.

Kauffman took a memorandum of the goods, but made no note of who the customers were.

He denied that Mr. Gomez gave him three promissory notes to pay for the jewelry, two of which Gomez claims to have paid.

Kauffman could not say whether or not any of the jewelry had ever been sold.

The value of the goods, he said, was over $9,000.

The first that he knew that the diamonds were pawned was on Oct. 17, when he received the tickets.

The broker acknowledged the receipt of $2,000 paid him by Mrs. Gomez, but denied that he knew the money was the proceeds of pawning the jewelry.

He admitted that Mr. Gomez had told him that if he would return the $2,000 he (Gomez) would give him the tickets for all the diamonds pawned.

Justice McMahon thought that he had heard enough, to justify him in holding the

DEPUTY-SHERIFFS IN CHARGE.

Burkhalter & Co.'s Stock Replevied by Creditors.

A small army of deputy sheriffs is in charge of the big wholesale grocery store of C. Burkhalter & Co., of 121 and 123 Hudson street, today.

Some of the unpreferrred creditors have begun replevying stock to cover merchandise delivered to the firm, while the fall of yesterday with $700,000 liabilities and Aug. 2,000,000 assets, giving preferences of $183,107, and it is to look after these interests that the Sheriff has taken possession of the stock.

The largest replevin was in favor of Fleming & Crooks for $13,500. Other writs were issued in favor of James H. Smith & Co. for $2,070, James H. Stout & Co. for $1,102, Adolph Ottlinger, $807; Henry M. Day, $610, and Jacob D. Nordlinger & Co., $387.

Neither of the partners in the firm was in town today. Charles Burkhalter, the senior partner, who has been ill for some time, was said to be at his home at East Orange, and John H. Burkhalter at his home at Glen Ridge, N. J.

The latter was in town last night and delivered very emphatically the stock that was in circulation to the effect that the firm had sold $100,000 of its paper within the past two days or that it had been any questionable transactions whatever.

It is said today that some of the unpreferrred creditors will believe the stories and are preparing to prosecute the members of the firm.

Charles H. Fancher, President of the Irving National Bank, said this morning that he was not yet prepared to give any definite statement with regard to assets and liabilities.

Assignee Fancher says that he expects to satisfy all the creditors of the firm, which had been doing a largely increased business since.

NEILL SENTENCED TO DEATH.

London's Poisoner Promptly Convicted by His Jury.

The Revolt in Argentina—General Foreign News by Cable.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—An immense crowd gathered about the Old Bailey this morning, anxious to gain admission to the court-room to hear Justice Hawkins sum up the Neill murder case. Hundreds were turned away, but many of them lingered in the vicinity to hear the fate of the prisoner.

Notwithstanding the comments made by counsel in the case yesterday, reflecting upon the morbid curiosity that led women to flock into the court-room, there were if anything more women present to-day than on any previous day of the trial.

Neill did not appear to be at all disturbed by his position, and after taking his seat he looked about the court-room with great composure. Justice Hawkins reviewed the evidence at length, saying that the jury was not to expect the prosecution to submit mathematical proof of the commission of crime.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty. They were out five minutes.

Justice Hawkins at once sentenced Neill to be hanged.

THE REVOLT IN ARGENTINE.

Citizens Enthusiastic Over the Success of the Rebels.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—A special despatch to the Times from Buenos Ayres says that the revolt in Santiago del Estero had its origin in a revolt of twenty-five citizens, who were headed by Garcia, the leader of the last outbreak in the city.

They made an attack on the cabildo (city hall), which was defended by a number of troops. The latter fought desperately for an hour, but the attacking force compelled them to surrender.

The loss on both sides was five men killed and nine men wounded. The Governor and Vice-Governor were captured by the rebels.

The Times correspondent says the revolt is the result of a well-matured plan to oust the provincial government. The city is quiet, but great enthusiasm prevails among the people at the success of the rebels.

Two British "Mutineers" to Serve a Year and Be Cashiered.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The two men belonging to the Thirteenth Company of the Army Service Corps at Portsmouth who were arrested for their participation in the mutiny that took place there on Oct. 19 have been sentenced each to one year's imprisonment and to be ignominiously cashiered.

The Morning in a leading article reports that a few cases of harness cutting have recently occurred at the Chelsea barracks, where a detachment of the Army Service Corps is stationed. The colonel, unable to discover the culprits, gave orders that the whole company be confined to the barracks.

Joint Meet of Three Canoe Clubs.

Today and Saturday and Sunday the Yonkers Knickerbocker and Hoboken Canoe clubs will have their fall meet on the east shore of the Hudson River above Dobbs Ferry. There will be campfires at night, and it is expected that on Sunday a large number of the canoeists' friends will go up from New York to spend the day with them.

HABEAS CORPUS FOR A BABY.

Sensational Story of the Doughtys and Bradford.

Mrs. Bradford Adopted the Child and Told Her Husband It Was Theirs.

A most sensational tale of alleged betrayed honor and confidence by an old family friend, claimed lack of maternal affection, panning off on an unsuspecting husband of the innocent cause of all the trouble, and counter charges of murderous intent against the foster-mother—grows out of Eleanor Doughty's writ of habeas corpus against Mrs. May Bradford, demanding her to produce the petitioner's unnamed infant before Supreme Court Justice Beach next Monday morning.

Had it not been for the issuance of this writ a bouncing baby might in another week have been christened Harry Bradford. Now his fate is much in doubt, and it may be months before he has even a name.

The youngster first saw light at 928 West Seventeenth street Aug. 27 last. His mother is Eleanor Doughty, twenty-one years old, who says the baby's father is Stephen S. Vreeland, an advertising agent, of 150 Nassau street, who lives at Tompkinsville, N. Y.

They are not married.

Dr. Mortimer W. Shaw, of 147 Greenwich street, who was engaged by Mr. Vreeland to deliver the baby, told an Evening World reporter this morning that the young woman, before the child was born, told him that she wanted some good wages and in return he would give her a fine baby.

She saw Miss Doughty's child and took it, with the understanding that the mother was to sign papers making a full surrender of the child. This was delayed, and since then Miss Doughty, her mother and lawyer have been trying to get the child back.

Mrs. Bradford incurred her husband's displeasure by bringing home a boy for adoption of whose parentage she knew nothing. She was attached to the youngster, however, and to keep him then told her husband that it was their own offspring and had been born during his absence from the city, during an illness which he knew of but attributed to something else, and that she had put it out to nurse.

Such a consummation Mr. Bradford had devoutly wished for and, despite his wife's first story, he believed the second, and the baby soon became installed in his affections.

When, ten days ago, Miss Doughty refused to sign the release papers, on talking legal advice Mr. Bradford again started her husband by acknowledging that she had snatched the boy was not their own flesh and blood but adopted child.

Mr. Bradford, though shocked, determined with his wife that Miss Doughty should not have the child except in a legal manner, and they refused pecuniary offers, they say, from Miss Doughty's mother. Then came the writ.

As the matter is now in court Mr. and Mrs. Bradford are somewhat averse to keeping the baby because of the notoriety that has been given them. If the court orders it Monday this morning and added:

"I admit that I lied to my husband, but it was for the baby's sake. When he objected to keeping it I took it back to Miss Doughty, and she refused to take it."

"What could I do? I couldn't abandon the baby, even though its rightful mother was so anxious to part with it. So I lied to my husband, hoping to make a man out of him and save his reputation when he grew up."

The charge of Grandmother Doughty that I was preparing for his burial in case it died, as I expected it would, is wickedly false. The child would have died but for me, for I had marasmus, and its head was diseased because of its lack of treatment before I got him. He's well now, though."

Mrs. Bradford brought out the youngster to show his now healthy condition, and his adoption was certainly corroborated her.

Mrs. Bradford denied that she wanted money for the child, and intimated that it was the Doughtys who were looking for money.

To offset Mrs. Bradford's statement, Mrs. Doughty, Eleanor's mother, showed the reporter this letter:

NEW YORK, Oct. 20, '22.

Call on me and bring necessary clothing to take your child with you. If you do not heed this I will take it to the Charity and Correction, and I will adopt it.

"My daughter never wanted to part with the baby, but Mr. Vreeland, the man who ruined her life, although an old friend of mine, did, and he hired this Dr. Shaw to find a place to put it."

"At first I wanted to let it go—before it was born—but I was Eleanor."

Mrs. Doughty admitted that she wanted Vreeland to support her daughter's child.

"He never denied its paternity," she said. "I would rather not say whether we will endeavor to have him marry Eleanor just now. We want the child first."

Miss Doughty to regain possession of the child is due to their desire to force Vreeland to make some kind of a settlement with them, financial or matrimonial, and added:

"I never got a cent from Vreeland or any one else in connection with the adoption of the baby."

ALLEGED BUNCO MAN DAVIS.

Taken to Newburg to Be Tried for Swindling a Farmer Out of $5,500.

The alleged bunco sharper, Pat Davis, or "Red Austin," the story of whose arrest in front of the Hoffman House yesterday afternoon was told exclusively in last night's Evening World Sporting Extra, is today a prisoner in the Newburg jail.

Although Davis showed fight when arrested by Chief of Police James H. Davis, of Newburg, who was assisted by Patrolmen Rhynander and Detective Woods, he was quickly overpowered and was soon on his way up the river.

The charge against him was that of swindling an aged and credulous farmer named Crowley, who lives about ten miles from Newburg, out of $5,500 by the ancient gold brick game Dec. 14 last. Davis is alleged, and his pal went to the Quonset Bank with the old man, who drew the money and exchanged it for the brick.

On the way home the sharpers kicked their victim out of the wagon and, driving back to Newburg, escaped with the plunder.

Since then Davis has not been seen in the vicinity of Newburg, but was finally located in New York. When he arrived in Newburg last night he had only $55 in his possession. He is said to have been an intimate associate of O'Brien, the king of bunco men.
